The Honorable Donald J. Trump
President of the United States
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear President Trump:

Western Governors are aware of reports that the White House is considering issuance of an executive order to address energy infrastructure development and that the order may include provisions affecting the implementation of the state water quality certification program under Section 401 of the federal Clean Water Act (CWA). We urge you to direct federal agencies to reject any changes to agency rules, guidance, or policy that may diminish, impair, or subordinate states' well-established sovereign and statutory authorities to protect water quality within their boundaries. Further, any executive order (or corresponding federal action) aimed at improving or streamlining the state water quality certification program under CWA Section 401 should be informed by early, meaningful, substantive, and ongoing consultation with state officials who have vast experience and expertise in the program's implementation.

With the adoption of the CWA, Congress purposefully designated states as co-regulators under a system of cooperative federalism that recognizes the primacy of state authority over the allocation, administration, protection, and development of water resources. Section 101 of the CWA clearly expresses congressional intent to:

...recognize, preserve, and protect the primary responsibilities and rights of States to prevent, reduce, and eliminate pollution, to plan the development and use (including restoration, preservation, and enhancement) of land and water resources, and to consult with the Administrator in the exercise of his authority under this chapter.

This declaration demonstrates the understanding of Congress that a one-size-fits-all approach to water management and protection does not accommodate the practical realities of geographic and hydrologic diversity among states.

State authority to certify and condition federal permits of discharges into waters of the United States under Section 401 is vital to the CWA's system of cooperative federalism. This authority helps ensure that activities associated with federally permitted discharges will not impair state water quality. The U.S. Supreme Court has addressed the issue of state authority and concluded that, "[s]tate certifications under [CWA Section] 401 are essential in the scheme to preserve state authority to address the broad range of pollution." S.D. Warren Co. v. Maine Board of Environmental Protection, 547 U.S. 370 (2006), citing 116 Cong. Rec. 8984 (1970).

Since the enactment of the CWA, states have exercised their authority under Section 401 efficiently, effectively and equitably. We question the need for any federal action to amend or clarify federal policy or regulations governing the implementation of Section 401, as instances of delays or denials of state water quality certifications are extremely limited. Moreover, the CWA provides ample avenues for challenging state certification determinations.

Curtailing or reducing state authority under CWA Section 401, or the vital role of states in maintaining water quality within their boundaries, would inflict serious harm to the division of state and federal authorities established by Congress. Any executive order addressing the implementation of CWA Section 401 should be developed in genuine consultation with states to ensure that the CWA continues to effectively protect water quality, while maintaining the partnerships and the essential balance of authority between states and the federal government.

Western Governors are committed to establishing a framework to incorporate the early, meaningful and substantive input of states in the development of federal regulatory policies that have federalism implications. By operating as authentic collaborators in the development and execution of policy, the states and federal government can demonstrably improve their service to the public. By working cooperatively with the states, the Administration can create a legacy of renewed federalism, resulting in a nation that is stronger, more resilient and more united.

Sincerely,

David Ige
